To whome it may concern
I received a notice from the board on August 4 for failure to notify One Call for excavating.
I was not excavating more than trying to pull out a sand point well and did not think it would be of any consiquence. The gas meter was about 20 feet away. I asure you in the 20 plus years of business I have never had a problem with any utilities. The person who checked on this at the site was very out of hand and did not even take a minite to ask what was going on.
In visiting with Larry Jones he told me that you need a permit even to use a spade to dig a hole. So I guess I did not realize this. I can only say it to be a learning experience. John Dagel is a friend and not a regular customer I was helping at the time and has owned the property since the 50's and knows where the utilities are pretty well. The notice I received from watertown utilities said this was a warning and not a complaint so I dont know why this went any further. I can only say I wont let this hapen again. I would like to get this matter behind me and move on,
